

Grafted Flowering Weepers

So what do you call a collection of grafted weeping standards? Simply Beautiful! A stunning year-round feature tree for any landscape, this collection is especially appealing from August to September when trees are laden with flowers.

Malus domestica 'Echtermeyer' (weeping standard)

ECHTERMEYER WEEPING CRAB APPLE

This is a hardy, low and wide-spreading, deciduous, ornamental tree with a lovely weeping habit. It bears deep red buds and rosy-red flowers in spring which turn to purplish-red small fruits. It makes a knock-out specimen tree in a small landscape.

Prunus persica 'Rose Charm' (weeping standard)

ROSE CHARM WEEPING ORNAMENTAL PEACH

This is a beautiful grafted tree, grown as a weeping standard. It produces long pendulous branches with semi-double rose-pink blossom. Foliage is mid-green changing to reds and yellows during autumn.

Prunus serrulata 'Cheals Weeping' (weeping standard)

CHEALS WEEPING ORNAMENTAL CHERRY

This old Japanese weeping cherry is a prolific flowerer. Spring sees the pendulous branches covering themselves with a show-stopping display of clear, rose pink double blooms. It is highly ornamental, right down to its shiny, coppery coloured peeling bark. New foliage emerges a bronze colour, changing to green into the warmer months turning to gold, orange and red hues in autumn.

Prunus mume '(weeping standard)'
MUME WEEPING STANDARD ORNAMENTAL PLUM

This is a beautiful, grafted weeper with a moderate growth rate. It produces green foliage, turning yellow, red and bronze before leaf fall in autumn. It has beautiful double, light-mid pink blossom in late winter to early spring (signalling the start of Spring). As a grafted weeper, it makes an outstanding feature in any garden.

Prunus persica 'Crimson Cascade'
(weeping standard)
CRIMSON CASCADE WEEPING ORNAMENTAL PEACH

This is a beautiful grafted specimen with long pendulous branches. Foliage is crimson-purple in spring, turning to a softer reddish-dark-green during the summer months. Flowers are a deep crimson-red.

Prunus serrulata 'Shirotae' (weeping standard)
'MT FUJI' GRAFTED WEEPING ORNAMENTAL CHERRY

A very popular feature tree for small gardens. This deciduous, ornamental cherry develops a spreading flat crown with branches that droop down slightly. A beautiful display of pure white, semi double blossoms cover the tree in early to mid-spring, followed by finely serrated, pale green leaves which darken to mid green over the warmer months. In autumn, foliage turns shades of orange and red.

Prunus yedoensis x subhirtella 'Snofozam' (weeping standard) SNOW MOUNTAINS WEEPING ORNAMENTAL CHERRY

A prolific bloomer and beautiful Autumn colour all in one compact tree! This variety of grafted Weeping Cherry has a strong weeping habit. Spring offers masses of white flower clusters which cover the pendulous branches before the reddish-bronze new growth begins to emerge. Through the warmer months, the serrated foliage turns green and by autumn another beautiful display of colour can be seen in shades of orange, gold and red.
