

Acer campestre

COMMON MAPLE, FIELD MAPLE

Compact, slow growing small tree with a dense round canopy, and a somewhat corky bark. Small leaves with rounded lobes, dark green in summer, which turn a beautiful clear yellow in the autumn. Green inconspicuous flowers from September to October. Paired samaras spread throughout the tree and hang in clusters well into winter.

Great as a shade tree in medium to large gardens. Adds great autumn colour and could be used in avenue planting. Great as a street tree. Good for narrow sites.

Tolerates most conditions, including dry alkaline and compact soils. Can be grown in full sun or part shade and will tolerate some pollution.
